Suspicious deaths. Homicide unit and major-crimes section leading police investigation

Calgary's homicide unit is investigating after a mother and young boy were found dead in a quiet northwest neighbourhood Thursday.

Police spokesman Kevin Brookwell said officers responded to a house call in the 200 block of Evanspark Circle N.W. shortly before 1 p.m. and, upon arrival, found the woman and boy in "serious medical distress."

Both were later pronounced dead at the scene.

Calgary police were searching for a "suspicious vehicle" that had left the scene, Brookwell added, and at about 3:30 p.m. it was located on Highway 2 near Didsbury by the RCMP.

Mounties pulled the vehicle over and detained the male driver, Brookwell said, although it wasn't immediately clear what connection, if any, he has to the incident.

Police found no one else but the two victims inside the home, Brookwell added, but quickly located other family members elsewhere, including a man believed to be the husband of the deceased woman, as well as several other children.

The family was not known to police and Brookwell said Thursday it was the first time officers had been to the home.

A neighbour named Mike, who didn't want his last name published, said he heard loud noises coming from the home around lunch time. Shortly after, he said, police arrived on scene.

"I was out here working on my truck. I didn't see anything unusual," Mike said.

"It's terrible from what I hear," he added. "A lady and a child dead. It's scary, but it happens."

Area residents John Beck and Michael Darasz heard about the deaths on Twitter and came down to the scene to see for themselves.

They described the incident as out of character for the neighbourhood, which is typically quiet and family-friendly.

"There's a lot of kids around here," Beck said.

No decision. Board split on granting parole to driver who killed five

The National Parole Board has been unable to reach a decision on parole for an Alberta man convicted of killing five people when his cement truck smashed into the back of their car.

One person on the two-member parole panel said yes and the other said no after a hearing in Calgary for Daniel Tschetter.

The board said another hearing would have to be organized with two new board members, but Tschetter told reporters he will drop his request for full parole. He is scheduled for statutory release June 16.

Tschetter, 55, had already been spotted driving dangerously before his truck slammed into a vehicle stopped at a red light in Calgary in December 2007. The impact was so violent that pieces of the car were scattered for hundreds of metres along Macleod Trail, a busy north-south thoroughfare.

Sixteen-month-old Zachary Morrison; his mother, Melaina Hovdebo, 33; Chris Gautreau, 41; and Gautreau's two daughters, Alexia, 9, and Kiarra, 6, were killed on impact.

He was sentenced in October 2009 to five and a half years for manslaughter and obstruction of justice. He is also barred from driving a commercial vehicle again.

Last September, Tschetter was granted day parole, which required him to live at a half-way house. He is not allowed to drive, consume alcohol or contact the families of his victims.

Mayor Naheed Nenshi announces the details of a plan to seek public input on what to do with $52 million in provincial "tax room" on Thursday. ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Are aldermen ready to face the dragon?

'Experimental' process. Politicians will enter Brett Wilson's lair to pitch ideas for how to spend the unexpected $52M tax windfall

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Enlisting the help of Brett Wilson, previously of Dragons' Den, the city has launched an "experimental" process of public consultation to help council decide what to do with a $52-million windfall.

"It's an opportunity to show that we can have serious discussion without being deathly serious all the time," Mayor Naheed Nenshi said on Thursday. "That's why I asked Brett to do it. He's a bigger-than-life personality, and I asked him to ask tougher questions than he used to ask on Dragons' Den."

Those questions will come when Wilson hosts a debate between five aldermen who have each volunteered to "champion" one option for the $52 million in "tax room" that the city has on its hands.

That's because the province claimed less than expected from Calgary property taxes for education funding this year.

In addition to the public debate — to take place at Devonian Gardens over the lunch hour on May 28 — the city is soliciting feedback from citizens on what they think the money should be used for.

You can have your say online at Calgary.ca/52million or by calling 311 or by participating in one of several public forums to be held in malls around the city, starting on May 22.

"We really are, as a city, trying to get people involved in what we do and how we do it," Ald. Peter Demong said. "And we have to keep trying unique and different ways to get people's interest."

Feedback will be gathered until June 2.

Five ideas for $52 million

- 1 Let the buses roll! Build more bus rapid transit roadways
- 2 Give business a break! Reduce taxes on non-residential properties
- 3 Revitalize our communities! Repair and upgrade older neighbourhoods
- 4 Drop the debt! Reduce the city's $3.4-billion debt load
- 5 Give it back! Return the money to those who pay property taxes

'Criminal'

Drivers being hosed by 'unethical' fuel tax on tax: CTF

At least one Calgary driver says it's "criminal" for the government to be collecting a tax on a tax when he fuels up.

Alan King, an instructor for Quality Driving School, said he was happy to get his $7 and change back during the Canadian Taxpayers Federation 15th annual Gas Tax Honesty Day Thursday.

"It's criminal," King said outside the Fair Deal gas station on 17 Ave SE Thursday.

"Especially when the oil and gas comes from Alberta."

CTF Alberta director Derek Fildebrandt gladly calculated and returned to King the tax he paid on his fuel up.

"High gas taxes are one thing, but taxing tax is un ethical," Fildebrandt said.

The average Albertan pays around $15 in taxes each time they fill up their tank, Fildebrandt said, costing the average two-car Alberta family nearly $800 per year. Over $80 million is collected from Albertans annually.

Fildebrandt said any taxes that are siphoned off by the federal or provincial governments should be allocated back to roads.

'Need to happen'. Pipelines key to Calgary's future: Mayor

In many ways, 2012 was "the year of Calgary," but the city's future prosperity remains tightly tied to the ability of the oil industry to reach new markets, a gathering of business and political leaders heard Thursday.

"We are in a situation now where we've got way more product than we've got markets for," said Calgary Economic Development president and CEO, Bruce Graham. "Getting our product to tide water is critical — east, west and south."

Mayor Naheed Nenshi delivered a similar message to the crowd at the CED's annual Report to the Community event.

"We have to figure out a way that we can get access to multiple markets to reduce the risk within our energy sector," Nenshi said.

"We have to be able to do it in a way, of course, that is environmentally responsible — and that is seen to be environmentally responsible — because that is vital for our future."

When it comes to the proposed Keystone XL pipeline to the United States, the Northern Gateway pipeline to the west coast, and a hypothesized pipeline to Eastern Canada, Nenshi said: "All of these need to happen."

Graham said political decisions relating to these pipelines "will shape the economic confidence not only of the city, but of the province and country."

Spencer West scaled Mt. Kilimanjaro on his hands but said completing the trek between Edmonton and Calgary was an even greater challenge.

The legless man completed the Free The Children campaign We Walk 4Water Thursday at Mountain Park School in southeast Calgary with dozens of kids clapping and chanting his name as he crossed the finish line.

"I'm tired, my arms are killing me, I'm ready for a few days of sleep, but that last little bit, to have those kids cheering for us, brought up our energy again," he said.

Sprouts and the city. Community garden planted in heart of downtown

Among the towering buildings of downtown Calgary, volunteers are hoping to sprout some community-grown veggies.

For the fifth year, Downtown Calgary, the Calgary Drop-In and Rehab Centre and the Calgary Food Policy Council utilized planters along 3 Street between 5 and 6 Avenue S.W. to plant a community garden.

From spinach and swiss chard to potatoes and herbs, the food grown in the heart of the downtown will eventually be harvested and used by the staff at the Drop-In.

"This year we're changing up what we're planting — we're doing more root vegetables and herbs based on what the chef at the Drop-In has asked for," said Downtown Calgary executive director Maggie Schofield. "It's a great community builder."

While the amount of food produced is often only enough for one meal for the clients at the Drop-In, Paul Hughes with the Calgary

John Stewart, a volunteer from the Calgary Drop-In and Rehab Centre, helps to plant a community garden in downtown Calgary Thursday.

KATIE TURNER/METRO

Food Policy Council said the garden is largely symbolic.

"It's really not that much space; it doesn't produce a lot but it shows people that even in this challenging environment, things can grow right in the middle of the city."

HEY CAMPERS, SHOULDN'T WE AT LEAST WAIT UNTIL SUMMER?

IN DEFENCE OF
Mike Morrison
calgary@metronews.ca

This weekend, it seems like almost every single Calgarian is going camping, which is confusing, because camping is something you do in the summer, and summer doesn't actually start for a few more weeks.

But thanks to beer commercials that make camping look like some sort of a sexy dorm party that I would never be invited to, May 2-4 has somehow become the unofficial start of the tent-pitching season in Alberta, even though to me, there are much better ways to spend your long weekend.

Firstly, let's look at the facts. The scariest movies known to man have taken place in the woods. Evil Dead, Friday the 13th and The Blair Witch Project all feature teens who, instead of getting away from it all, are met with an untimely and gruesome demise. So can someone tell me why you'd want to spend your extra day off sleeping in a place that literally inspires stories of murder?

A little luxury in the leaves

If I'm expected to give up the comforts of my apartment, I'm going to need more than the nylon from my tent and a few rocks to separate me from the Swiss Family Robinson.

Second, most of us spend a lot of energy avoiding conversation with our neighbours, right? Well, unlike our homes, camping doesn't afford us the luxury of a concrete wall or wood fence divide. Complete strangers linger just steps away, and due to our stereotypical Canadian heritage, we're practically forced to interact and likely befriend them, despite the blasting of Nickelback from their car's cassette player. If I'm expected to give up the comforts of my apartment, I'm going to need more than the nylon from my tent and a few rocks to separate me from the Swiss Family Robinson.

Then there's the weather. Just because it's been so nice lately does not mean that you should consider going camping this weekend. Historically, there's rarely been nice weather on Victoria Day weekend. I'm assuming it's a statistical fact. Snow, sleet and rain are as sure as Oscar Fech running in this year's municipal election.

I can envision the tweets and posts that will fill my newsfeed on Sunday and Monday morning from surprised campers who are disappointed by the snow and the wet weather that has made fireside s'mores impossible to make. That's assuming your campground is even allowing campfires, as many of Alberta's parks are currently on fire ban. (By the way, s'mores can easily be cooked in a microwave.)

It's not necessarily that I hate camping, it's more about the discomfort brought on by all the unknown variables that come along with it: the bugs, the weather, the people around me, the increased likelihood that I'll end up drinking Black Ice.

It's all just too much to handle. Can any of you honestly tell me that the last time you were lounging around a cosy hotel room you were thinking, "It would be so much better if I was sleeping outside and eating burnt hot dogs off of a stick right now?"

Let's just decide to leave the camping to the reality shows, shall we?

Giving it away for free. Musician to hit the road on 'Love Bus' tour

With her guitar in hand, one Calgary-area musician is planning to hit the highway this summer in hopes of spreading a little love.

Okotoks resident Emily Rowed is embarking on what she's dubbed the Love Bus Tour across Alberta, B.C., and Saskatchewan performing free shows at hospices and care centres.

"You can go and play a bunch of cafés and wine bars ... but I think there's a benefit that might last longer," she said. "To give it away for free and to offer it in places where maybe it hasn't existed before could have the potential to do something."

Rowed will be travelling to at least 20 venues over the course of a month in a van, which she's transforming in to the Love Bus, and is encouraging audience members to sign their name or a positive message on the bus.

At the end of the tour, Rowed plans to compile a music video from her time

"Music is what I have to offer, but I think everyone has their own thing," she said.

"I'm hoping people are touched or inspired."

River patrol. Police plan to monitor points on river to educate and enforce safety and liquor laws

Don't just head out on the water this season without first giving some basic thought to your safety, city officials are urging Calgarians.

"Calgary has some incredible water systems, and we hope that people take that opportunity to enjoy it," said deputy police Chief Trevor Daroux. "But when you're making those plans to go out and enjoy the rivers and enjoy the waterways, also make safety an important part of your planning."

Waterway users should make sure they have the proper equipment — particularly life jackets — and adequate skills to handle whatever situations might arise, said deputy fire Chief Ken Uzeloc.

"Conditions can change daily — the water levels, the temperature of the water, the current, and even some of the debris and the visibility can change on a moment's notice," he said.

And when it comes to the advanced rapids at Harvie Passage on the Bow River, Uzeloc said potential users should get out of the water and examine the conditions from shore before deciding whether or not to proceed through or take the portage around.

"Recreational and inexperienced, unequipped people should not be going through Harvie Passage," he added. "This is not just a joy ride. This is whitewater."

Batter up. Redford rejects claims she is taking baseball bat to lawmaking

Premier Alison Redford is dismissing opposition accusations that her team took a baseball bat to democracy in a spring legislature sitting that featured last-minute, pell-mell lawmaking.

"I think it was a really good session in terms of what we were able to accomplish in terms of legislation," Redford told reporters on Thursday.

The spring sitting wrapped up on Wednesday and the house will not sit until Oct. 28. In November, Redford faces a mandatory review of her leadership by members of her Progressive Conservative party.

The three opposition parties said the spring sitting continued the trend under Redford of little legislation being introduced and key bills that are brought forward being held until the last minute and rammed through the debate process, sometimes in all-night sittings.

"I wouldn't look at this as a session of accomplishment. I think it has been a session of failure, and it's the reason why they (Redford's Tories) are desperate to get out of here and go home for the summer," said Wildrose Leader Danielle Smith.

NDP MLA Rachel Notley said Redford has passed 16 bills this year and passed 16 last year. That is about half the average yearly legislation completed under her predecessor, Ed Stelmach, and a third of the work done under former premier Ralph Klein.

"These guys have just stopped working. They've stopped working in the legislature," Notley said.

"I log on every couple of days and get involved in the forums three or four days a

The site is aimed at people of all fitness levels and the idea is to share information to anyone interested in wellness, fitness and nutrition.

Lau believes obesity is a worldwide problem and got involved to help combat that.

"It's really important to start addressing obesity and prevent things like diabetes associated with an unhealthy lifestyle," he said. ALLISON PARDER/FOR METRO

Denied. Supreme Court refuses to hear toilet-lid killer's appeal

The Supreme Court of Canada will not hear Tyler Lee Nolet's appeal of his second-degree murder conviction for clubbing another man to death with a toilet-tank lid.

Nolet said he was acting in self-defence when he bashed Kenny Wong with the porcelain lid in a Calgary bar in 2008.

The men had a previous altercation and Nolet told the court he felt threatened when he spotted Wong at the bar.

But the trial judge said Nolet was likely out for revenge over his previous run-in with Wong.

The judge sentenced Nolet to life in prison with no chance of parole for 12 years.

As is its custom, the Supreme Court gave no reasons for its decision not to hear the appeal.

Shawn Chaulk of Fort McMurray just hopes that whoever buys the items lets people see them. JASON FRANSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

No cheap skates.

Albertan sheds pieces of power after finding all there was to find

It started almost two decades ago with one purchase: a $20 hockey stick once wielded by a forgotten player for a string of mediocre teams.

It ends at the auction block this week when millions of dollars are likely to change hands. This may be the world's largest game-worn collection of memorabilia from the world's best player from the sport's last dynasty.

Shawn Chaulk owns a hoard of everything Wayne Gretzky. He says it's all for a singular cause that only a full-blooded hockey lover can savour.

"When you're a fan, fans are usually at a distance," he recently told The Canadian Press in the basement office of his home in Fort McMurray.

The space is a forest of game-used Gretzky hockey sticks, a dressing room of game-worn Gretzky jerseys and a trainer's bag full of assorted pucks, gloves, helmets and skates — all touched, used and sweated in by the Great One himself.

"You love the game. You love the athletes, at a distance. At best, you get to attend an event and see them in person. Again, from a distance. And that's as close as we get. This was all to help me get closer to the game."

Why sell, then?

Insurance is a big reason. It's hard to buy coverage for such collections, and the thought of a fire makes him blanch. Also, he's already got most of the main Gretzky items likely to come on the market, so some of the thrill is gone.

"There's not a lot of chase left," he said. "It's like I've gotten to the top of the mountain. I have the memories. It's maybe time to spread it out a little bit." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On sale

The online auction begins Friday through Montreal's Classic Auctions. Among the of hundreds of items on sale are:

- The puck Gretzky shot to score his 500th goal, as well as the jersey and skates he was wearing at the time
- Gloves and helmets worn

during Stanley Cup victories and regular games

- Skates replete with scuffs and repairs
- Gretzky's early-1980s Oilers Nike track suit
- No. 99 practice jersey
- Gretzky's equipment bag

Mother's Day shooting suspect brought to court

Akein Scott. Faces bond of $10 million, witness recognized him in police video

As the tally of those wounded in a Mother's Day parade shooting in New Orleans ticked up to 20, the suspect made his first court appearance on Thursday, remaining silent as a judge set his bond at $10 million US.

Prosecutors said a witness picked out a photo of Akein Scott, 19, from a lineup. An arrest affidavit said the unidentified witness told investigators that Scott was the person seen in a surveillance video that police released to the public as they searched for him for three days. The witness also said Scott was carrying a silver-and-black semi-automatic handgun at the shooting scene, according to the affidavit.

Scott, shackled and wearing an orange prison jumpsuit, stood by as his court-appointed attorney handled the proceedings.

Magistrate Judge Gerard Hansen set Scott's bond at $10 million — $500,000 on each of the 20 counts in the shooting. Authorities earlier said 19 were wounded, but prosecutors told Hansen the number had increased.

Bosma case

Police find incinerator on accused man's farm

Police in Hamilton, Ont., have seized an incinerator found on the property of a man accused of killing a 32-year-old father after a test drive.

Police believe Tim Bosma was killed on May 6, the same night he took two men for a test drive in a truck he had posted for sale online. His body was found this week, burned beyond recognition.

Dellen Millard, 27, of Toronto, has been charged with first-degree murder, forcible confinement and theft of a vehicle. Investigators are searching two of his properties in the Waterloo region of southwestern Ontario — an airport hangar and a farm — and say they have removed the incinerator from the farm property.

Det.-Sgt. Matt Kavanagh wouldn't say if the incinerator had been used or not. He expects police will continue searching three vehicles, the hangar and the farm for at least another day.

Duffy resigns from Conservative caucus

Unanswered questions. Senator stepping aside amidst spending scandal

Senator Mike Duffy resigned from the Conservative caucus to sit as an independent Thursday night amid a controversy over his housing claims, leaving a host of questions about the nature of his expenses and why the prime minister backed him for so long.

The employment status of Stephen Harper's chief of staff, Nigel Wright, remains unchanged — despite his secret gift to Duffy to help repay the improper expenses.

Only a week ago, the Conservative government was hailing Duffy's leadership for repaying the funds the Senate said he owed. Senate Leader Majorie LeBreton declared the matter closed.

But then it came to light that Wright had cut Duffy a personal cheque to cover the repayment in March. Harper's office characterized it as a personal gift, but this week Duffy called it a loan.

The Canadian Press reported Thursday that Duffy campaigns for the Conservatives during the April 2011 election while claiming to be on Senate business.

"Mr. Duffy's claim that he had secured a bank loan came as a complete surprise. All of the revelations relating to the expenses during the campaign are new," a government official said on condition of anonymity.

Greenhouse gas. Harper says technology is key to reducing emissions

Technological change will prove to be the key to cutting greenhouse-gas emissions, Prime Minister Stephen Harper told a blue-chip audience on Thursday.

Simply imposing emissions targets or trying to cap economic growth to reduce emissions isn't going to work, Harper said during a question-and-answer session at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City.

"I am convinced that, over time, we are not going to effectively tackle emissions unless we develop the lower-emissions technology in energy and other sectors," he said.

"That is the thing that will allow us to square economic growth with emissions reduction and environmental protection. I'm convinced if we cannot square those, we are not going to make progress globally."

Any realistic international agreement to limit emissions has to cover everyone, not just the developed world, he added.

"We need a mandatory, international protocol that includes all significant emitters, and if we do not get that we will not be able to control global emissions."

Mayor appears to smoke crack in video: Torstar

'False and defamatory'

Lawyer retained by Toronto's Rob Ford asks how reporters can verify what someone is doing or smoking in a video

A cellphone video that appears to show Toronto Mayor Rob Ford smoking crack cocaine is being shopped around that city by a group of men involved in the drug trade.

Two Torstar News Service reporters have viewed the video, which appears to show Ford sitting in a chair, inhaling from what appears to be a glass crack pipe. Ford is incoherent, trading jibes with an off-camera speaker who goads the clearly impaired mayor by raising topics including Justin Trudeau and the high-school football team Ford coaches.

At one point he is heard calling Trudeau a "fag." Later in the 90-second video he is asked about the football team and he appears to say, "They are just f—g minorities."

Torstar had no way to verify the video, which appears to clearly show Ford in a well-lit room. Attempts to reach Ford and members of his staff were unsuccessful.

A lawyer retained by Ford, Dennis Morris, said that Thursday's publication by the Gawker website of some details related to the video was "false and defamatory." Morris told Torstar that by viewing a video it is impossible to tell what a person is doing. "How can you indicate what the person is actually doing or smoking?" Morris said.

Ford's chief of staff, Mark Twohey, would not listen to questions by Torstar News Service on Thursday night and abruptly hung up when they called.

The video was taken on a phone by a person who said he has supplied crack cocaine to the Mayor. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Er Shun and Da Mao, a pair of giant pandas on loan from China, made their debut at the zoo for some invited visitors Thursday, before they go on public display Saturday. Montreal

No terrorism charge in subway smoke attack

Charges of committing a terrorist hoax have been dropped against four people arrested last year when Montreal's subway system was paralyzed at the height of rush hour by smoke-bomb attacks.

Jean Pascal Boucher, a spokesman for the director of criminal and penal prosecutions, says the Crown decided there was insufficient evidence to support the charge.

Three women face charges of mischief and conspiracy while a man faces an additional charge of possession of a prohibited weapon.

At least three smoke bombs were tossed into several subway stations in Montreal on May 10, 2012.

Media reports at the time tied the attacks to hardcore student protesters who considered the main protest groups too timid and not far-reaching enough. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The long road to legalizing pot

Aptly slow. Taxes are expected to bring in millions of dollars in state revenue

Complicated

All of this planning in Washington state and Colorado is set against uncertainty about what the ultimate response from the U.S. Justice Department might be.

- Marijuana remains illegal under federal law.

It's one thing to legalize marijuana. It's another to figure out how to sell it, grow it, regulate it, test it and tax it.

Voters in Washington state and Colorado made pot use for adults over 21 legal last fall, but that was just the first step. On Thursday, Washington officials are expected to release the first draft of rules governing the state's new marijuana industry.

Washington's Liquor Control Board has been devising rules for the industry, covering topics such as how the plants will be grown, how marijuana products will be tested for strength and quality, and how many retail stores will be allowed.

The rules are expected to become effective in August, and the board will begin accepting applications for growing, processing and retailing licenses in September. The state expects to issue pot licenses in December.

So when would people be able to legally purchase marijuana in Washington? Probably not until spring of 2014.

While marijuana users look forward to legalized sales, state officials are anticipating that pot taxes would bring Washington hundreds of millions of dollars a year in new revenue.

Man ID'd by victim's blinking found guilty

An Ohio man was found guilty Thursday in the shooting death of a man who authorities say identified his assailant by blinking his eyes while paralyzed and hooked up to a ventilator.

Ricardo Woods, 35, was convicted of fatally shooting David Chandler in Cincinnati in 2010 by a jury that began deliberations Tuesday. Woods also was convicted of felonious assault. He could be sentenced to life in prison.

Police interviewed the 35-year-old Chandler while he was hooked up to a ventilator, paralyzed after being shot in the head and neck in 2010 as he sat in a car. He was only able to communicate with his eyes and died about two weeks later.

Prosecutors showed jurors a taped police interview in which they say Chandler blinked three times for "yes" to identify a photo of Woods as his shooter.

The defence had tried to block the video, saying Chandler's blinks were inconsistent and unreliable. Judge Beth Myers had watched the video and said that she found the identification reliable.

Dying identifications relying on gestures are often not used in trials because of concern over reliability or interpretation. But some have been used in murder cases around the U.S. that have ended in convictions.

Grade 5 students write letters to PM, compare commercials targeting Trudeau to 'cyberbullying'

Some Grade 5 students have some advice for Prime Minister Stephen Harper: Stop being mean to Justin Trudeau.

Seven students from an Ottawa-area Catholic school have written to Harper asking that he pull Conservative attack ads, which began running within hours of Trudeau claiming the Liberal leadership last month.

Teacher Natalie Casault said the idea came from the students themselves during a lesson on government last month. To the kids, she said the ads looked just like cyberbullying, which they'd learned about a couple of weeks earlier.

The ads feature video of Trudeau doing a mock striptease for a charity event, his head surrounded by fairy dust as a narrator sneeringly recounts his past experience as a camp counsellor and drama teacher.

Casault, who teaches at Ecoles des voyageurs in Orleans, Ont., said she didn't raise the issue, a student did.

"He said, 'Yeah, they're really not nice, he did a charity and they're laughing at him and he looks like a clown and they're saying he's just a simple teacher and that's not fair. They can't do that, madame, that's cyberbullying.'"

Other students agreed, so Casault suggested they write letters to Harper. One little girl did and read it to the class, which eventually prompted others to write their own.

Company puts brakes on flying car after B.C. crash

The Transportation Safety Board says a U.S. manufacturer of flying cars has grounded all five of its prototypes until it can determine a cause for a recent crash in B.C.

One of the Maverick flying cars crashed near a Vernon, B.C., elementary school last week, leaving a pilot and a passenger with minor injuries.

The TSB's Bill Yearwood says the manufacturer is attempting to determine what caused the temporary loss of control. Until that has been determined, Yearwood says the maker has decided to ground the prototypes.

The TSB has no jurisdiction in the investigation, and Yearwood says it will be up to the builders to report back on the cause of the crash.

Blast from the past: Beaver Canoe paddles back to life

Canadiana comeback. Target to carry collection from homegrown '80s brand that will include apparel, home decor

In what is billed as a first for the brand, the Beaver Canoe for Target collection will feature home decor products. The home collection will include more than 65 pieces, like furniture, pillows, lighting, frames, vases and candles.

The Beaver Canoe collaboration with Target will also encompass a clothing collection for the retailer, which will include hoodies, sweatshirts, T-shirts, track pants and long-sleeve tops for everyone from toddlers to adults, in addition to outerwear and accessory offerings for men and women.

Prices for items in both the home and apparel collections will range from about $8 to $100. The Beaver Canoe apparel line is slated to arrive in Canadian Target stores on Sept. 8, with the home collection set to hit stores on Sept. 15. The partnership marks the second exclusive collaboration between Roots and Target.

The retailer carries the Roots Outfitters collection, including fashions for women, men, boys, girls and toddlers.

Target is bringing an added dose of Canadiana to its stores north of the border through a new partnership with Beaver Canoe.

The U.S.-based retailer has announced an exclusive collaboration with the Beaver Canoe brand, which is part of Roots Canada.

Beaver Canoe was founded in 1982 as a partnership between Roots and Camp Tamakawa, located in Ontario's Algonquin Park, to build canoes designed by famed outdoorsman Omer Stringer. BEAVER CANOE/FACEBOOK

Step away from the sirloin. Rising food prices lead to more comparison shopping

A recent survey of Canadian adult consumers found a large majority of them believe the price of the food they buy has gone up in the past year and more than half said they are doing more comparison shopping than before.

The Ipsos Reid study done for the Royal Bank suggests the average monthly food bill, not including eating out, for the 3,024 people it surveyed last month was $411 per household.

Eighty-four per cent of respondents said their food prices have increased over the past year. The survey, conducted April 2 to 15, also found 57 per cent of respondents said they comparison shop more than before and 41 per cent said they were more budget conscious or less likely to make impulsive purchases.

"In light of concerns over escalating food prices, more Canadians are looking for cost-saving strategies they can use on their next trip to the grocery store," said Jason Round, head of the bank's financial planning unit. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Riding the rails across Canada to promote transit infrastructure

The birth of Canada's national railway has been widely viewed and written about as the physical link that connected and, ultimately, created our country.

More than 128 years later, London, Ont.'s Kadie Ward is out to show the government there's more work to be done.

Ward, along with a multimedia crew, will board a VIA Rail train Tuesday in Halifax and ride the rails all the way to Vancouver, where she'll attend the Federation of Canadian Municipalities' annual conference. Along the way, she'll blog about how cities on the route are

Wireless deal

Telus plan to buy Mobilicity could up prices, warns advocacy group

Telus announced a plan Thursday to buy struggling wireless carrier Mobilicity for $380 million, a deal observers say will prompt higher prices for monthly cellphone service if it is allowed.

"Maybe you want to talk to your provider and renegotiate your deal now," said John Lawford, executive director of the Public Interest Advocacy Centre.

The company, which does not require long-term contracts, brought unlimited talk-and-text plans to the marketplace, said Lawford. "In a lot of places where Mobilicity offers service you're going back to just three operators. You can guess who they are — Bell, Telus and Rogers. Prices will just go up."

IT'S TIME TO LEAVE THE CAPSULE

1 Diplomacy. Osaka Mayor Toru Hashimoto defended forced prostitution of "comfort women" in the Second World War, saying that they were necessary in providing much needed "rest" to soldiers. Hashimoto, previously the youngest governor in Japanese history, stated last year that Japan needed "a dictatorship." He has what I call "political Tourette's."

2 Migratory patterns. The U.S. Senate is considering a bill allowing Canadian "snowbirds" to stay down south for longer. Currently, Canadian citizens can spend up to six months in America without losing their health coverage. The new bill would grant an extension of 60 additional days. If it passes, the "early bird" team at the Cheesecake Factory will also throw in a plastic couch cover with a cable subscription for 24-hour reruns of Golden Girls and Matlock.

3 Revolving doors. Jay Leno is replaced by Jimmy Fallon, whose spot will be filled by Seth Meyers. Jon Stewart takes a break, leaving John Oliver to host The Daily Show, and Barbara Walters announces impending retirement while Craig Ferguson hopes Letterman will do the same. Jimmy Kimmel has lost weight, so no one recognizes him, and when I ask my grandmother what she watches, she says, "Johnny Carson."

4 Oops. P.E.I. Sen. Mike Duffy misclaimed expenses for his Ottawa home, but once audited, was able to pay back $90,000 with a cheque from the PM's chief of staff. He also repaid $1,050 for expenses declared while in Florida for non-Senate business. In unrelated news, a man arrested for grand theft auto told authorities, "Was that not my mother's car? My bad. Take it back."

5 Space Oddity. They're calling astronaut Chris Hadfield a rock star: First Canadian to command the International Space Station, almost a million Twitter followers and YouTube hits, and a Bowie cover music video. After being up for so long, he finally came back to Earth, acclimating himself at a rehabilitation centre. He's not just a rock star, he's Steven Tyler.

6 Just chew it. Life moves quickly and there's not always time to grab a Red Bull, espresso, or mochalattechino. So put a pack of Jolt Energy Gum in your pocket, and never again worry about feeling sluggish, or sleepy, or having your heart-rate dip below 190 bpm. Jolt is poised for stimulant success with slogans like, "Don't drive drowsy," "Kick ass in class," or my personal fave, "A party in your pocket!" Umm ... Yes please.

7 Anti-social media. Disney actress Ashley Tisdale has been shaken by an obsessed fan who sent her more than 18,000 tweets before showing up at her home. LAPD is investigating, but did not consider him dangerous until reading an insane message where he said that High School Musical was the greatest movie ever made.

8 This weekin... 1976, The Rolling Stones hit No. 1 on U.S. album charts with Black And Blue, their first with Ron Wood replacing Mick Taylor on guitar. Now celebrating 50 years of sex, drugs, and rumours that Keith Richards is a vampire, the boys are coming to Montreal and Toronto. Excellent opportunity to party with granddad.

Barbie house opens with controversy

The Barbie Dreamhouse Experience, near Berlin's trendy Alexanderplatz shopping district, is a life-sized house full of Barbie fashion, furniture and accessories. It's open to the public until Aug. 25 before it moves on to other cities in Europe.

The attraction is not without criticism. A topless woman from female rights group Femen targeted the opening of the Dreamhouse Thursday, holding a burning doll on a crucifix and dozens of other protesters flooded the premises with signs, shouting.

METRO

Re-evaluating the dream

"For us, this so-called Dreamhouse symbolizes the beauty craze and the discrimination of women in modern day life. It presents a cliché of the female role in society."

Michael Koschitzki, Socialist Alternative editor told NBC News. The protest was supported by other left-wing demonstrators shouting "pink stinks" who were swiftly ejected from the Dreamhouse site by security staff.

RE: Mayor Defends Use Of Wartime Prostitution, published May 15

May I suggest a proper headline for your article on a Japanese mayor justifying sexual slavery during the Second World War?

"Mayor defends use of wartime rape."

In your article you quote the mayor as saying kidnapping, forcible confinement, rape, torture, and beatings were not sex trade, but in Japan were necessary to "maintain discipline."

Let us be clear: torture and sexual abuse are never necessary, and can never be justified as a means of maintaining discipline. What happened was rape.

The use of so called "comfort women" was neither discipline nor sex trade. It was abuse and torture. Tens of thousands of young women were kidnapped as sex slaves by the Japanese army during the Second World War. Many women were teenagers. Many died. Japan has never formally apologized nor compensated for this war crime. It was a war crime. It was torture. It was rape. The women who were abused deserve nothing less than a full apology. So does the world.

Stars of outer space

Film's final frontier.

With Star Trek the must-see movie this weekend, the Reel Guys look back at their favourite flicks from another world

Richard: Mark, Into Darkness is the best pure popcorn flick of the year so far. It is state of the art in every way, particularly when it comes to the effects. As great as it looks, I'm a sucker for '50s B-movie effects like the 40-foot tall martian in the low budget 1959 space opera The Angry Red Planet. The campy creature was actually a 15-inch tall puppet made from elements of a rat, bat, spider, and crab and was later featured on the cover of the Misfits' album, Walk Among Us. What are some of your favourites?

Mark: Interesting you mentioned Angry Red Planet. I saw it when I was 10 at a downtown matinee and still shudder at the scene where the astronaut was turned into lime Jell-O. But when I was 16, Barbarella became my favourite movie set in outer space — that is, Jane Fonda's cleavage. But if it's cheese you're looking for, I want to nominate Mars Needs Women, a made for TV movie from 1967. Basically a beach party flick set in outer space featuring amazons, strippers and secretaries, it's best appreciated late at night with the kind of wine that comes in a box.

RC: Box wine has enhanced many a bad movie for me. No wine needed for Moon, a unique and fascinating sci fi film directed by David Bowie's son, Duncan Jones. Set on a space station, it's the story of a worker, played by Sam Rockwell, who discovers he may not be alone on his mission. To say anymore would ruin a really well constructed movie that cares more about ideas than special effects.

MB: Moon is a classy puzzle movie that owes a lot to Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey, the classiest space movie ever, maybe even too classy for its own good. Is it heretical to say that it bored me a bit? Alien sure didn't bore me. And its sequels, even the weak ones, kept me excited. But let's remember that not all space movies are necessarily monster movies. I'm thinking of The Right Stuff and Apollo 13, two films that rightly celebrate the courage and tenacity of the early astronauts. Both very exciting movies, I think.

RC: I agree, and let's not forget In the Shadow of the Moon, a beautifully shot documentary that features real life astronauts like Buzz Aldrin and Neil Armstrong.

MB: On a lighter note, let's not forget Galaxy Quest, the funniest movie to take place in outer space.

Director. Jeff Nichols

Stars. Matthew McConaughey, Reese Witherspoon

This slow moving Mississippi river-set movie features infidelity, murder and theft, but at its heart it isn't really about any of those things. Not really. Instead it's a story about the things we do for love. When two 14-year-old boys discover a mysterious stranger named Mud (Matthew McConaughey) living on a remote island, they get drawn into a possibly illegal scheme to reunite the loner with his true love Juniper (Reese Witherspoon). Methodical and moody, the film takes its time telling the story.

Director. Jason Buxton

Stars. Connor Jessup, Alexia Fast

Writer-director Jason Buxton's Blackbird feels like a typical drama about a troubled teen before upping the ante a third of the way through. Sean is a gothy-teen, shunned by the cool kids at school despite a budding romance with Deanna, the hockey captain's girlfriend. Yet things go sideways when the murder tale Sean posts online sparks outrage in the community and he's thrown in jail for plotting a school shooting. The film's strength comes from Buxton's ability to keep viewers guessing. IAN GORMELY

Pinkett Smith talks the power of women

Angela Davis doc.

Actress says spending time with activist changed her and prompted growth

Jada Pinkett Smith may have started as an actress, but these days her list of jobs includes author, singer-songwriter, philanthropist, successful businesswoman — and, of course, wife and mother.

With husband Will Smith, she started Overbrook Entertainment, which has produced many of Smith's films, as well as the upcoming remake of Annie.

But Pinkett Smith's more recent focus has been the documentary Free Angela Davis and Other Political Prisoners, which marks the 40th anniversary of the acquittal of the 1970s political activist who was once on the FBI's Most Wanted list.

Davis was removed from her teaching job at UCLA in 1969 because she was a member of the Communist Party.

A year later, she was charged with murder and kidnapping in a shootout in front of the Marin County, Calif., courthouse, then acquitted by an all-white jury.

Pinkett Smith says she learned a lot from spending time with Davis, who was by her side for this interview.

What did you know about Angela Davis growing up?

I knew that she was a pivotal part of the movement and I knew that she was powerful and I knew that she was intelligent, but what I didn't receive was the beauty of her feminine side, you know, and her softness, and the strength in her vulnerable nature ... I've learned a lot just simply being in her presence in that way.

You seem quite comfortable sharing your views on social media — you recently asked whether white women should be allowed on the cover of black women's magazines.

One of the reasons that I did that is right now one of my very strong focuses at this point is trying to figure out how to engage women to flow power to one another. The idea is that there's a white woman's issue. Or there's a black woman's issue. There's a Latina woman's issue. The idea for women to understand is that if we could come together and flow each other power for issues that affect us all, that we would get a lot done.

These are subjects that we can't be afraid to talk about because they hurt. That's the step toward getting to solutions, and the step toward community.

Jordana Brewster lives life in the fast lane

Fast & Furious 6. In a high action movie full of muscles and mayhem, actress taps into her maternal side

RICHARD PECKETT

Metro World News

There are very few movies where you can use phrases like "oiled bodies" and "torqued to the max" and accurately describe both men and machines — but Fast & Furious 6 is one of them. It's the series' latest gear-head film where muscle Dominic Toretto (Vin Diesel) and the rest of his car-thiefing gang smash bang and wallop their way through yet another international criminal threat. The sixth instalment brings its hefty carbon footprint to London to stop the evil Brit, Owen Shaw (Luke Evans), with all the death-defying stunts, explosions and sick-making driving we've come to expect from the franchise. Amongst all of the testosterone-fuelled fist pumping and steely looks, there's the relative calm of Jordana Brewster, who plays Mia Toretto, Vin Diesel's on-screen sister and linchpin of the "criminal family." We chat to Jordana about real-life speeding, babies and why guys who drive souped-up cars are "douche bags."

It's an intense, high-octane movie that frankly gave me heart palpitations. What gets your heart racing?

Ah, you know, I'm really claustrophobic, so that'll get my heart racing.

Any bad experiences?

I think it's something that comes with age, and I'm only 33, but it happened in my late 20s: I got in a plane and it felt really enclosed and I started freaking out and I just couldn't breathe.

Show offs

What's with guys and flashy cars?

Guys that drive souped-up, flashy cars look a bit ridiculous. Do you think that they're a bit of a penis extension?

I think they can be for some men ... and you usually know when you see it. The car that's the loudest and the flashiest will have a douche bag behind the wheel. Yeah, it's like jewelry or the bag you're wearing, you shouldn't have to show off too much through something material.

You play quite a maternal role in the latest Fast and Furious, has the film made you broody at all?

Catch Jordana Brewster in Fast & Furious 6 in theatres next Friday. HANDOUT

Has it made me broody? Meaning wanting a baby? Yeah. I definitely want kids really soon. I would like two or three, so I better get started and my husband, who is eleven years older than me, is game whenever I'm game.

The girls do as much fighting as the guys, are you a little envious that you didn't get a few more fight scenes?

A little bit. That was a sacrifice ... I love what the baby brings into the mix. I love that it shows (Diesel's character) Dom's very sweet vulnerable side. The fact that he has a new nephew shows the new dynamic in Mia and Brian's relationship, but I didn't get to kick ass like Gal (Gadot), Michelle (Rodriguez), and Gina (Carano).

I've been in quite embarrassingly pathetic scuffles. Have you ever been in a proper fight?

A girl slapped me once. I went to an all girls' school in New York and a girl slapped me in the dark room — I was developing pictures — and she slapped me and I slapped her back. It was a bitch slapping.

This Hangover is all Alan

Zach Galifianakis. The weirdest part of the trio becomes the focal point of this final instalment

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

What's one more trip to Las Vegas between friends? The Hangover Part III finds Phil (Bradley Cooper), Stu (Ed Helms) and loose cannon Alan (Zach Galifianakis) teaming up for one last road trip gone wrong. Only this time, Galifianakis' Alan goes from comic relief to main character, which is a particularly risky proposition — at least according to Galifianakis.

Alan really takes centre stage in this instalment. Yeah, as disheartening as that is (laughs). No, I mean we'll see if the audience thinks that an Alan storyline is sustainable for a movie — I mean a lot of Alan. There's a lot of Alan in this. I was excited because we got to explore Alan a little bit rather than have him be just a one-dimensional character that's kind of weird and saying random things. In this third instalment I think there's a little bit more of an emotional arc with him, which I appreciate. It's more of a story than just jokes with Alan this time. I don't know at the end of this where Alan goes. I think it's kind of open-ended, but at least he seems like he's on the right path.

I was going to ask where you see him five years from now.

Running the Tea Party. No, that's just a good-natured joke. I don't know where Alan would be. Hopefully he's married, and he probably drives by Phil's house a lot and honks to see if Phil will come out, and then Phil maybe looks through his blinds to see who it is, if it's Alan outside. Every other Thursday Phil will come out and say hi to him.

They've been billing this as the final instalment. Why is the trilogy the standard for film series?

Well, part of it is overstaying your welcome, I think. After the first one I was fine with just leaving well enough alone, to be honest. But then it was so fun to do the movies, and I thought there was more to explore, ultimately. But after the third one ... it's part of, as I said, not overstaying your welcome, and just the timing of it seems right to not do anything else with this. I've never really thought about the trilogy thing. The good thing about the third one is it allows kind of a nice goodbye. With the second one there's no closure, really. There was an event, they'll go on with their lives. This one seems like there's a little bit of closure.

The Hangover films have been phenomenally successful. If this one follows suit, do you think you'll have to try to talk them out of making a fourth one?

Well, I think it's bad to do movies because of economic gain. As an entertainer or an actor, you want to try to do other things and challenge yourself to try other roles, and it's time to move on. I think everybody feels that, the director and the other actors — and not out of anything but love. There won't be a fourth.

Speaking of doing new things, you're currently filming Birdman, a comedy from Alejandro Gonzalez Iñárritu, who's better known for heavier films. It's a comedy, and Alejandro hasn't made one. He's a great filmmaker, obviously. The little I can tell you about (it)is you kind of know you're in the hands of a really experienced technician and great filmmaker. It's been a really great work experience for me. I'm there with really serious actors who've done really accomplished work. I think I'm the only one in the cast who's never won a trophy ...

Arrested Development.

The 15-episode run will be available all at once on Netflix on May 26

TODD
GILCHRIST

Metro World News in Hollywood

Although it's hard to pinpoint precisely why Arrested Development failed to connect with many viewers during its initial, three-season, 53-episode run, it seems likely that one reason was the show's narrative density.

While its main thrust was chronicling Michael Bluth's efforts to corral his wildly dysfunctional family, the series featured countless plot lines that slowly shifted into focus thanks to asides and ever-evolving references that rewarded obsessive attention spans and returning fans rather than first-time or sporadic viewership.

Now that the show is finally back, creator Mitch Hurwitz spared no effort in creating 15 new episodes that are as complex and layered as their predecessors. But even though audiences will enjoy the luxury of sorting through them all at once thanks to their simultaneous release on Netflix May 26, the show's cast is quick to observe that even they struggled occasionally to wrap their heads around dialogue that might eventually be meaningful in as many as three or four different ways.

"I'll try to explain it clearly but it'll come out probably really confusing," confesses Michael Cera, who rejoined the show's fourth season as a writer as well as a co-star. "But there was one scene that was like a five-page scene in the computer lab, and different sections of this scene would appear in different episodes. So you'd be actually having to deliver a line that made sense in multiple, different contexts, that actually play against each other, and we'd have to deliver it in a way that tries to work for all three of those. And then you'd see an episode and you have different information and it means something totally different. That was really confusing."

Ironically, Portia de Rossi, who plays Michael's delusionally well-intentioned sister Lindsay, insists that the structure of the episodes, which follows just one character's point of view rather than all of them, should actually be easier, not more difficult, for viewers to understand.

"It's easier to digest than the original series, because we were following storylines A, B, C, D, E, and F," she explains.

Tony Hale, Jeffrey Tambor, David Cross, Ted Sarandos, Michael Cera and Alia Shawkat attend the red carpet premiere for the launch of Netflix Original Series, Arrested Development, season four at Vue Leicester Square on May 9 in London, England. STUART C. WILSON/GETTY IMAGES FOR NETFLIX

"Now, we're just following this one character, so in a way it's easier to watch, and we've got a little bit more time to tell the story — as much time as we need."

What seems to excite the cast the most is not simply the process of reuniting for more fun, but for the experience of creating something that seems largely unlike anything else that's been on television — even including in the original show.

David Cross, who plays Lindsay's feckless husband Tobias, says that audiences will thrill at the experience — that is, after they get used to it.

"I think it's going to be a bit of an epiphany or a revelation," he says. "You're going to realize, 'There's a structure to this that I wasn't aware of when I started watching.' That's going to make everybody triple-excited, and there's going to be a sense of discovery to it that I think will be really exciting, and really define what TV can do."

Despite the fact that only two of the episodes will focus on his character Michael's peccadilloes, Jason Bateman remains a unifying presence as he sums up the experience of getting "Arrested" again.

"I hope that's appreciated by the few people who do love the show," he says diplomatically. "They seem to be a group who likes things somewhat challenging. And the fact that Netflix affords (Mitch) the opportunity to have these stories go out over 15 different episodes, that are so intertwined that the same scene will repeat, from different angles, in multiple episodes, is a really unique thing and exciting thing to be a part of, in working with his complexity and with Netflix's distribution platform. It's a neat time to watch TV."

Big networks, big names, big plans

What's changed for FOX, NBC and ABC as they battle for ratings.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fox network's new season plans

What's new

Jack is back! A signature character from Fox's history, Kiefer Sutherland's Jack Bauer returns with 24, at least for a little while. Fox is launching a series of high-profile mini-series, and the first will come next May with a 12-episode run of 24, which went off the air in 2010. The second such series, Wayward Pines, will be a thriller produced by M. Night Shyamalan and starring Matt Dillon, based on the novel Pines.

What's gone

Randy Jackson, for one. The last of the original American Idol judges is leaving with the franchise in a ratings free-fall. Fox was keeping mum on the issue Monday, but Mariah Carey, Nicki Minaj and Keith Urban may want to avoid long-term leases. Fox programming chief Kevin Reilly said the show will likely revert to a three-judge panel. He blamed format issues more than the judges for this year's ratings problems.

Seth MacFarlane

Star power

Seth MacFarlane. J.J. Abrams. M. Night Shyamalan. They may not generate celebrity magazine covers (although MacFarlane did host the Oscars this year), but they are the type of brand-name creative forces that Fox's young audience respects. They all have projects coming up on Fox during the next year.

What they need

If American Idol is never going to be the dominant force it once was — and that would be asking an awful lot — Fox needs another show that can be attractive to all audiences. Let's face it. Even if The Following was Fox's most popular newcomer this year, a show about a serial killer is never going to fill that bill.

Big move

Fox's Saturday nights of fugitives, drunks and losers is gone as the network turns its lineup over entirely to sports. The long-running series Cops is switching to Spike.

NBC's plans for the upcoming television season

What's new

A lot. The long-struggling network invested heavily in new programming, and has ordered 17 new series for next season. John Malkovich as Blackbeard. James Spader as a wanted fugitive. Dracula brought to life. A cops drama from the guy who made Law & Order. More supernatural stuff from J.J. Abrams. A cooking show. A quiz show. A home renovation show. If a couple of these make an impression on viewers, NBC will be thrilled.

What's gone

The newsmagazine Rock Center, in a move sure to cause bad blood between NBC's news and entertainment divisions. Matthew Perry's star vehicle Go On, failing to recreate that Friends magic. And about two dozen other sitcoms you never watched.

Life support

The serial killer drama Hannibal has terrible ratings, but NBC had such high hopes for it this spring that executives can't bear to pull the plug. Maybe it's their livers on the line.

Star power

Michael J. Fox is a beloved sitcom actor, respected even more for his dignity in handling Parkinson's Disease. Now he's essentially turning those real-life experiences into a sitcom, where he will play a sportscaster going back to work. Interestingly, NBC gave Sean Hayes a more prominent spot on a Thursday night schedule geared to broad-appeal comedies, perhaps so Fox won't feel the pressure to save the network. And Seth Meyers is moving from his Weekend Update desk to his own late night show.

Michael J. Fox

What they need

Somebody to save the network.

Big move

Revolution moves to Wednesday nights, where it will no longer have the advantage of a big audience tuning in for The Voice. Chicago Fire moves to Tuesday. Moving successful shows to new nights is always risky, perhaps even more so for programs at an early stage in their development.

Highlights of ABC's fall schedule

What's new

Tuesday night. ABC is scheduling four of the eight new series on its fall schedule for Tuesday night, making it an entire evening of new shows. That's a bold move for a network, which usually likes to couple new series with established ones on its schedule. One of them, Marvel's Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D., is a crime-fighting series based on a comic book and produced by Joss Whedon. That might even entice — gasp! — some men to watch ABC.

What's gone

Happy Endings, Body of Proof and Malibu Country.

Big move

Cutting Dancing With the Stars from two nights to one in the fall, eliminating the Tuesday results show. On its face, that seems a strange decision for what is usually ABC's most popular show. But the Dancing audience is filled overwhelmingly with older women, and advertisers consider that one of the least valuable demographic groups. ABC entertainment chief Paul Lee said the network will try to cast more dancers popular with a younger audience.

Star power

James Caan. Well, maybe he was in 1980 or so. But ABC is asking him to largely carry a new show, Back in the Game, where he plays "an opinionated, beer-guzzling ex-athlete who never quite made the cut either as a single father or professional baseball player." In Bad News Bears fashion, he's asked to coach a team of misfits, including his grandson.

James Caan

What they need

Viewers. Lee talks about building a brand with sophisticated and emotional shows. That's nice, but ABC is in the same boat as every other broadcast network not named CBS. Its audience and influence is dwindling, and it can use a breakout hit or two.

Jake Johnson is heading to Atlanta to shoot a buddy-cop movie with Damon Wayans Jr. HANDOUT

New Girl's Jake Johnson breaks out onscreen and off

TV. Johnson plays Nick Miller, one of Zooey Deschanel's three male roommates

Season one of Fox's New Girl introduced TV fans to the "adorkable" Zooey Deschanel and the hilarity of Max Greenfield. Both earned Emmy and Golden Globe Award nominations for their work.

As season two wraps up Tuesday, their co-star Jake Johnson is emerging as another one to watch — both on the series and in Hollywood.

On New Girl, Johnson plays Nick Miller, one of Deschanel's three male roommates.

He's a curmudgeonly, 30-something, broke bartender who gave up on his potential somewhere along the way. Secretly, though, he has a big heart and a desire to do more — which is largely inspired by his crush on Deschanel's Jess.

No one could be happier about Nick's development than the 34-year-old Johnson.

"It felt like season one I was asked more to just support other people's stories a lot. I was very happy (in) season two that Nick kind of came out of his shell and was given great stories and the writers really found him," Johnson said in a recent interview.

The Nick-Jess dynamic has come to a head this season with some viewers asking if it was too soon to pair up the characters. Johnson said that as an actor, it felt like the right time.

"Getting them together where if (Nick's) trying and screwing up or if they break up and he's heartbroken, I understand that more," he said. "Trying this thing is more honest."

Johnson said he received some perspective on his character from one of the show's directors.

"He said, 'Season one Nick was all about being grumpy and grounded. ... Season two, you should feel everything because those who are the most cynical and the most grumpy, it's because they're the most sensitive.'"

Meanwhile, Johnson is expanding his horizons off-screen as well.

He has a film called Drinking Buddies with Olivia Wilde, Anna Kendrick and Ron Livingston coming out this summer.

A movie called The Pretty One with Zoe Kazan premiered at this year's Tribeca Film Festival.

This summer, Johnson will head to Atlanta to shoot a buddy-cop movie alongside Damon Wayans Jr. and Nina Dobrev. (Wayans was

Not just about the acting

"I love writing. It's such a great thing to come up with an idea and develop it. I'm very interested in other writers and somebody who has a great idea but no 'in' into television. I'd like to see people get their dream shows on TV. It's something I'm really passionate about."

Jake Johnson, who says he would also like to work on something that helps aspiring TV writers get their shows on the air.

in the pilot of New Girl, but couldn't stay on the show because of his commitment to ABC's Happy Endings, which was cancelled Friday.)

Hit single Northern Touch proved to be a breakthrough for the genre as well as a number of the artists who were on the track actually had allergies. The day that we did Northern Touch I probably sneezed literally about 500 times," said Offishall. "I had a box of Kleenex by my side that day.

"That's one of those days I won't forget because we were at the studio, everybody was there, and I was just sneezing like a friggin' maniac while all this history is being made."

The lead single from the Rascalz's album Cash Crop, which went on to become one of the most successful hip-hop songs in Canadian history. It reached No. 41 on the top singles chart in 1998, the first domestic urban song to crack the top 100.

There was a common feeling among the artists involved regarding the breakthrough. Canadian hip-hop had largely been an underground phenomenon up to that point.

"Canada didn't support hip-hop on the level that it does now, all those years ago," said Offishall. "You have to understand, there was no Internet, there was no nothing to support us."

The popularity of Northern Touch did much to change that bias.

"That track just never dies," said Thrust, who was also on the track. "It's the beauty of people always coming up to you saying, 'Yo! I know that you're the one who did that verse!' And people can always quote it."

Two jingle writers come up with a Capital idea

Techno music. Capital Cities make fun, easy music while still venturing into some dark experimental sounds

JULIE SHANNON
Metro World News

It was instant creative chemistry when Sebu Simonian and Ryan Merchant met through Craigslist a few years ago — which is fortunate, because Merchant was the only one who responded to Simonian's post.

"He was looking for a producer to help him with his solo project," Simonian says. "He sent me some samples of his songs, which were really good. When we got together, we collaborated immediately."

The pair spent a couple of years penning jingles for TV commercials, but they always had other projects floating around, too.

"We collaborated on all kinds of stuff and putting together ideas," says Simonian.

"We realized all that repertoire was prime material to start a band."

So they did just that, starting the band Capital Cities in 2010 and putting out an EP the following summer. Their debut album, In a Tidal Wave of Mystery, comes out June 11.

As for describing their style, Simonian says Michael Jackson, Pink Floyd and The Beatles are among their influences. You could call it alternative-pop, or techno, or alternative- dance with a blend of upbeat, catchy tunes — or something else altogether. The indefinable quality is "somewhat intentional."

"It doesn't matter to me what we're categorized," Simonian says.

"Ryan and I try to make good music. Overall, we definitely like to make it dance-y — electronic, in-your-face, fun and upbeat and joyous — but we do try to venture into the dark side sometimes with experimental sound. Some-

Slim Shady hasn't been stabbed, but enjoy your spam!

Eminem wants to make it clear that reports of him being stabbed have been greatly exaggerated. His rep is dismissing a Facebook post purporting to show the singer "left nearly dead after being stabbed four times in NYC," according to E! News. "Not true," the rep says. "He remains un-stabbed." And it turns out this wasn't just an other false Internet rumour about a celebrity dying or getting injured. The post also subjected those foolish enough to click on it to an avalanche of spam.

Supportive Voight was unaware of his daughter Jolie's mastectomy

Talk about not being in the loop. John Voight says he found out about daughter Angelina Jolie's voluntary double mastectomy the same way everyone else did — reading her New York Times essay about it — despite having seen her just days before the news broke, according to the NY Daily News. "I saw her two days ago with my son Jamie (Haven). We all got together for his birthday, with her and Brad (Pitt). But I didn't know. It wasn't obvious at all," Voight says. "I found out (Tuesday) morning. I was as surprised as anyone and deeply moved by the way she's handled this. She's a very extraordinary person, the way she examined it and what she shared."

Sevigny says 'comfortable shoes' will chase off Paltrow's Met Gala blues

Chloe Sevigny thinks Gwyneth Paltrow may be overreacting by claiming she's through with the Met Gala. (Paltrow has sworn off the swanky New York event after finding this year's "un-fun" and too hot.) "Maybe her sleeves were too tight. If you're in a dress where you can't breathe, then you're not comfortable," Sevigny tells New York magazine. "You have to wear comfortable shoes and an outfit you can be OK in." The most important thing, according to Sevigny, is to not take it all so seriously. "I think it depends on what table you're at, and who you're with, and obviously your attitude," she says. "But it's a lot of hoopla over not a lot. Everybody thinks it's so much pressure, and you do the carpet and it's such a big deal, and it's just a museum fundraiser, you know?"

I've met enough wine-makers who think they're rock stars, so I guess it's only fair that a rock star can think himself a winemaker. Dave Matthews, the man behind the newly released The Dreaming Tree wines, is only the latest celeb to grape it up.

The roster of famous names making wine reads like an awards show guest list: Greg Norman, Mike Weir, Dan Aykroyd, Francis Ford Coppola, Sting, Wayne Gretzky, Madonna, and even Brangelina.

While I'd never suggest the others are dialing it in, Matthews has been hands on in choosing his Californian wine partners, and the resulting juice (if you'll forgive the obvious pun) sings in the glass.

The DT 2011 Chardonnay ($16.95 - $19.99) is a well-rounded, buttery chard with woody spice that just may have all you "anything but chardonnay" zealots burning your membership cards.

Its red sister, The DT 2010 Crush ($16.95 - $19.99), is a mega, merlot-led blend of California North Coast fruit with a rolling flavour of plums, raspberry jam and brown sugar that will duet well with a red meat-themed, long weekend barbecue.

1. Combine patty ingredients, keeping the mixture crumbly rather than compressed. With wet hands, gently form four loosely packed patties of equal size, each about 3/4 inch thick. Don't compact the meat too much or the patties will be tough. Using your thumb or the back of a spoon, make a shallow indentation about 1 inch wide in the centre of each patty. This will help the patties cook evenly and prevent them from puffing on the grill.

2. In a non-reactive bowl combine the salsa ingredients. Toss gently and then refrigerate for at least 30 minutes or up to 1 hour. (After an hour, the fruit

Sharks' Torres pays toll for head hit on Kings' Stoll

Sharks forward Raffi Torres was suspended for the rest of San Jose's second-round playoff series against Los Angeles on Thursday for an illegal check to the head of Kings forward Jarret Stoll during the opener.

The NHL announced the suspension a few hours before the Kings hosted the Sharks in Game 2. Stoll wasn't expected to play for the defending Stanley Cup champions.

Stoll didn't return to Game 1 after Torres hit him late in the second period of the Kings' 2-0 victory. Torres got only a minor penalty for charging on the hit, and coach Todd McLellan and captain Joe Thornton echoed Torres' belief that the hit was completely legal.

The Bruins carried the play throughout overtime. They applied constant pressure, but couldn't score during a power play when Derek Dorsett was penalized for interference at 2:20 of overtime.

Boston nearly won in regulation, but Johnny Boychuk's shot from the right point clanged off the left post with one-tenth of a second remaining. Then he hit the left post at the other end of the ice at 6:34 of overtime.

Zdeno Chara gave Boston a 1-0 lead at 12:23 of the second before Ryan McDonagh tied it with 1.3 seconds left in the period. Derek Stepan put the Rangers ahead 2-1 just 14 seconds into the third period, and Torey Krug tied it on a power play with his first NHL goal in four career games.

Blue Jays bats come alive just in time for rumble in the Bronx

'This team was built to score runs.' More batters loading bases as Toronto speeds to playoff pace

Though it sputtered to start the season, the Blue Jays offence is surging as they head to New York City riding a four-game winning streak.

Since being shut out by the Boston Red Sox a week ago, the Jays have averaged nine runs and more than 12 hits per game. Since pummeling Seattle 10-2 on May 5, the offensive numbers are still strong, averaging almost seven runs per game.

The result has been a 7-3 record over their last 10, which is pretty much how the Jays must perform over the remaining three-quarters of the season if they have any hope of playing in October.

The good news is that when the Jays are scoring like they are right now, they usually win. They're 13-0 when putting five or more on the board, compared to 4-24 when they score four or fewer. Their pitching and defence simply have not been good enough to carry them in low-scoring games.

"This team was built to score runs," manager John Gibbons repeated often during the club's sluggish start to the season. "And I believe we will."

But there were signs of a pending turnaround beyond Gibbons' optimism.

The club's league-worst .262 batting average on balls in play (BABIP) — a statistic that measures how many balls put into play, minus home runs, land for hits — in late April suggested they were somewhat unlucky in the first month of the season. Their BABIP so far this month is .302.

Quarter-final déjà vu for Canada

Canada was eliminated in the quarter-finals of the IIHF World Championship for a fourth straight year with a 3-2 shootout loss to host Sweden on Thursday.

Fredrik Pettersson scored the winner in the fourth round of the shootout as Sweden moved on to a semifinal meeting with archrival Finland.

Trailing 1-0, Nicklas Danielsson scored a pair of power-play goals in the third period to give the hosts a 2-1 lead. Canada's Claude Giroux tied the game just over a minute after Danielsson's second goal.

Steven Stamkos scored a second-period power-play goal.

Mike Smith stopped 30 shots in the loss, while Jonas Enroth made 39 saves for the win.

Canada last advanced to the semifinals in 2009 en route to a silver medal.

Canada had beaten Sweden 3-0 in the preliminary round. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Darvish outduels Verlander in Texas arms showdown

Geovany Soto ended Justin Verlander's night with a three-run homer that capped a seven-run third, and Yu Darvish lasted eight innings even though an anticipated pitching duel fizzled in the Texas Rangers' 10-4 victory against the Detroit Tigers on Thursday night.

Soto's drive just over the wall in left field came after Verlander walked in two runs — he had three previous bases-loaded walks in his career. Mitch Moreland's two-out double broke a 3-3 tie before Soto's drive put Texas ahead 8-3.

Darvish (7-1) won his fifth straight decision despite allowing two home runs for the third start in a row. Baseball's strikeout leader needed a career-high 130 pitches and matched his season low of six strikeouts.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

This has been a busy week for you, so maybe you need to slow down a bit. Right. And maybe the Sun will rise in the west and the tide won't come in. Aries never slows down — it's not in your nature.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Mars in your sign gives you all the energy and ambition you need to make a name for yourself, so go for it. Too often in the past you have waited for other people to take the lead.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

The thing you need to realize is that you don't have to enjoy something to be good at it. If fate points you in a certain direction today then that is the direction you should move.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Listen to what others say you should do today — then do the opposite. You know your mind better than they do so follow what your instincts tell you.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Today, you will be confronted by someone who has more power than you but that must not be allowed to faze you. They may have might on their side but you have right and that's why you will win in the end.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You may have strong opinions about an issue but don't waste your time shouting about it. Find ways you can make a practical difference, then get on with them quietly. It's not about words, it's about actions.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Having told so many people what you intend to accomplish don't you think it's about time you started actually doing it? Anyone can talk about making a difference but only a few people ever get round to it.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Mars in your opposite sign of Taurus will help you get rid of an emotional attachment you no longer need. Scorpio has a reputation for ruthlessness and today everyone will see it.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may be tempted to work twice as hard at something to make sure you get it done on time but is it necessary to put in so much effort and maybe exhaust yourself? No. Ease up.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Be careful what you start over the next 24 hours because you will have no choice but to finish it before you can move on to something else. Think before you act and don't let your passions rule you.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Chances are you will find yourself involved in some kind of dispute with your nearest and dearest. Whatever else happens, you must resist the urge to open up old wounds.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

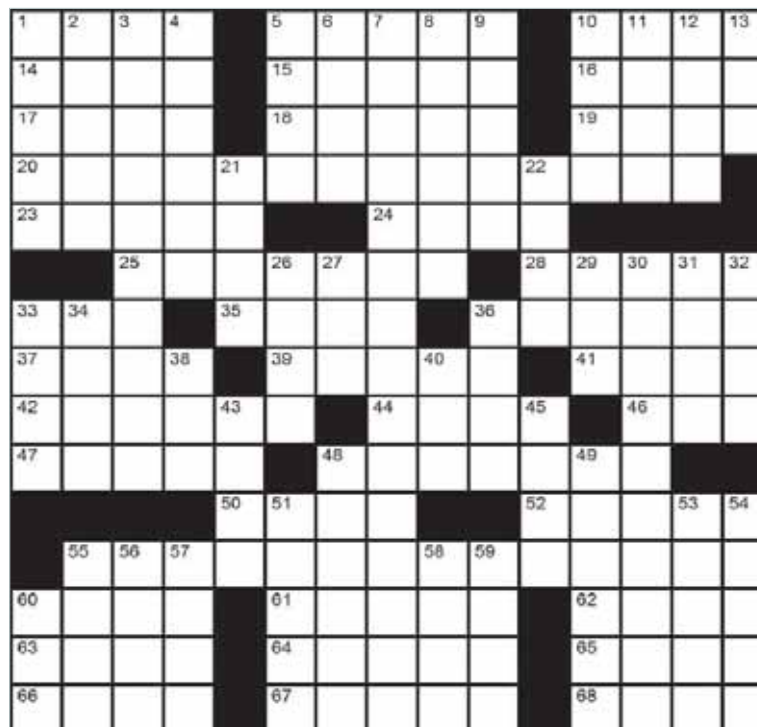

Someone else's good idea can be adapted by you to suit your own needs. Is that immoral? Of course not. There is no copyright on ideas, so you are free to take it and develop it any way you see fit. SALLY BROMPTON
